

Resolution to State NFTY-SAR's Stance That Water Is Not Wet

Submitted to NFTY-SAR at Winter Kallah 2018 Asefah

January 14, 2018

Background:

Recognizing a need to establish a firm stance about the "Is water wet?" debate, the writers and co-signers of this resolution are committed to make a firm stance for NFTY-SAR to agree on. There is a serious flaw that faces our region with differing opinions and this resolution will kickstart the process to create an imperative change.

This resolution does not limit your freedom of speech, everyone is entitled to their own opinion, it only states our stance as a Region.

NFTY-SAR's belief, with the passing of this resolution, will be that water is, indeed, not wet. Currently, many uninformed people believe that water is wet due to cultural pressures that surround us, but there are many informed people who believe otherwise. We, the writers and co-signers of this resolution, believe that NFTY-SAR needs a firm stance to state before NFTY.

This does not take away the voice from you, especially as NFTYites, and especially in a region as accepting and amazing as ours. This resolution has the support of some of the very brightest people SAR has to offer.

This is an effort to settle a very large debate facing humanity as we know it. Right now, the conversation might be small, but it is growing rapidly, just like a J-curve for the geography and population people would know it, or more simply put, just like Bitcoin's value. Change is needed before the conversation turns to violence or worse, the persuasion of SARites believing water is wet(it's not). The purpose of this resolution is to clarify the region's stance.

WHEREAS, Reddit user Pesce_Magico states that "The term wet itself implies that the wet material and the liquid that is wetting it are distinguishable, and that said material should be solid"; and,

WHEREAS, Water wets things but itself is not wet, just as fire burns things but is not burnt; and,

WHEREAS, “To say that something is wet, means that the water on the surface of that something can be removed” (Twitter user: @SimplyPutChaz); and,

WHEREAS, Meriam Webster defines wet as “covered or saturated with water or another liquid” and water cannot be saturated or covered with itself;

THEREFORE, LET IT BE RESOLVED that NFTY-SAR’s stance on this debate is that water is not wet, the most logical reasoning.

Respectfully Submitted,

Brandon Kennedy, CDTTY President 5777-5778

Danielle Gioia, CDTTY Communications Vice President 5776-5778

Respectfully Cosigned,

Matthew Warchol, KEFTY President 5777-5778

Val Light, NFTY-SAR Communications Vice President 5776-5778

Lindsay Rosenzweig, LIBERTY President 5777-5778

Daniel Tedeschi, COFTY Member 5776-5778

Charlie Forstein, NFTY-SAR Religious and Cultural Vice President 5777-5778

Daniel Marks, NFTY-SAR Programming Vice President 5777-5778